The Carolinas Air Pollution Control Association (CAPCA) is a nonprofit organization with approximately 800 active members from not only the Carolinas but the Southeast and beyond! Members represent local, state, and national air pollution regulatory agencies, a wide variety of industry, industry trade associations, environmental consulting and testing firms, equipment manufacturers, related special interest groups and the interested general public. These groups of people are CAPCA, the organization!

CAPCA provides a forum for communication for individuals and organizations with different perspectives on air pollution. CAPCA meets in the fall and spring of each year. The meetings consist of formal programs with presentations and panel discussions by recognized experts and appropriate professionals. The meetings also include time periods designed to allow having fun together. CAPCA believes social interaction is beneficial to building trust and opening lines of communication. As a member of CAPCA, you have the opportunity to exchange information and ideas with people working in the area of air pollution, from the local plant engineer and regulatory inspector, to the professionals who are writing regulations and developing policy. The membership is actively involved in identifying problems and sharing solutions. As a member, you receive current updates on regulations, compliance testing, monitoring, policy, health effects and research developments.

The Constitution and Articles of Association state the purpose of CAPCA as follows:

“To organize and bring together into a unified body and association those individuals and entities who are working in the field of clean air management, whether in governmental, individual, corporate, or association capacity and those individuals and other entities that are interested in clean air, for the purpose of providing educational resources and opportunities in the area of air pollution control and related matters for promoting, encouraging, improving, advancing, and strengthening the cause of clean air through any and all lawful avenues and opportunities available.”

Government, industry, citizens, can help each other. Can CAPCA help you? You can help us! If you share the goals of CAPCA and are interested in achieving them, join CAPCA today!
